Keeping in mind the need of the developmental professionals across the country as well as abroad, the CSJM University started a 2-year (4-semester) Post Graduate course in Social Work (MSW) in 2004. The balance between theoretical sessions and practical knowledge is the uniqueness of this course. Hence apart from learning within the four walls of the classroom, the students also learn under the open sky – in fields, in villages, in the operational areas of the voluntary organization etc.

The course prepares a cadre of such professionals who have the understanding of the dimensions of the development sector and skills as well to manage those dimensions optimally. The course emphasizes principles like 'grass roots learning', learning by doing' and 'land to lab'. According to the Social Work practicum, along with their regular classes, the students are supposed to carry out concurrent fieldwork twice in a week i.e. Fridays and Saturdays in the rural-urban community confronting different kinds of problems such as child labour, juvenile delinquency, women emancipation, illiteracy, health problems, HIV AIDS, drug addiction, reproductive and child health and various other emerging social issues and problems.
